The dating of historic buildings is one of the most important aspects of their study and one of the most difficult. The knowledge needed to associate particular features with their likely date range can only be acquired through extensive field study of buildings for which dates are known or suggested. The CBA's latest handbook offers practical help in this area: cataloguing fixtures, fittings and decorative details from over 400 houses of known date. A wide range of features, including stairs, doors, windows and their associated fittings, fixed cupboards and dressers (fig. 5), panelling, friezes, overmantels and finally general decorative features such as mouldings and stops, are meticulously illustrated in thematic sections.
